MISS ALICE EVERSMAN,
Just Returned From a Two Years' Absence Abroad.

THE scene has been entirely shifted during the past fortnight, and society has 1-ft Tuxedo, Lakewood, Hempstead, Old Point Comfort, and a few other between-season places, almost deserted. They are all off for Newport, Bar Harbor, Manchester, or others of the seaside places. And in these charming places the scene is all gayety from early morning until late at night. In fact, it seems almost as though humanity never slept.

It is a mad rush for amusement, all day and all evening. Bar Harbor had an auspicious opening in the concert of Mme. Eames, which opened its great Temple of Music yesterday afternoon, and the ball at the Swimming Club last evening. The ball has been set a-rolling, and will never cease for more than a few hours until the first day of September, when mountains and suburban clubs and country homes will be again in favor.

RESIDENT ROOSEVELT and his family are setting an example of delightful simplicity and informality, spending their summer in quiet with their own family and very intimate friends, picnicking, boating, sailing, riding, and the homely and wholesome exercises of haying and chopping wood. The President believes in teaching his boys the arts of farming, and in gaining this knowledge they are incidentally reaping a physical benefit from it.

Assistant Secretary Bacon, who has joined his family in their Long Island home, is doing likewise, and his crop of hay is in good shape, and he is feeling much benefit therefrom, not from the exercise, but from watching it from his well-shaded porch, and seeing that it was well done. Mr. Bacon's place is about fourteen miles from Sagamore Hill, the President's home.

As we are reveling in summer resorts and retreats, and it is only a question of "where to go," over in the Philippines the families of our officers have longed for such, and have only just found it. Really, for 300 years the inhabitants of the Philippines have wanted to find a place for the summer capital. There were some to be found, to be sure, but their inaccessibility made them of no use. The officers have finally discovered a place in Baguio, in the province of Benguet, in the northern Luzon system of mountains.

It is 5,000 feet above the sea, and surrounded by fragrant pines. The temperature is delightful, and as a retreat from the torrid plains of where most of the Philippine cities are situated, it is almost ideal. It is the intention of the Government to establish a retreat for convalescent soldiers and their families, in addition to making it an official rendezvous. The roads are being reconstructed, and everything is being done to make the place desirable. Invalids will be taken there instead of, as now, being brought all the way to the United States to recuperate. This is a matter in which all army officers and their families will rejoice; for it has been such a long-felt want.

In two years the headquarters of the Government will be established there in proper surroundings. Some of the officials, in fact, are already established there in their own summer homes, and there are golf links (real "links," for if not situated on a coast they are not called links, but a "golf course"), tennis courts, and telegraph are there, and, in fact, all the comforts of home will soon be there.

WHAT there is left here of Washington society is in the suburbs, and chiefly engaged in playing golf, and drinking tea or other cooling beverages at the suburban clubs. As much of it as can be accommodated have taken up quarters for a month or two at these clubs, thereby forsaking their city homes as far as they can. The possibilities of making the homes in Washington comfortable for the summer season are great, as most of the fashionable folk live far enough up town to get plenty of good fresh air, and it has been quite universal this summer to have a roof garden arranged on an elaborate scale. One of the prettiest of these, and the highest, was the one upon the pink palace of the Secretary of Commerce and Labor and Mrs. Straus.

They had a huge awning, with tropical plants stationed about, bright colored rugs, bamboo tables, chairs and couches, and it was altogether one of the most delightful nooks imaginable. Their house, built by the wife of former Senator John B. Henderson of Missouri, is on one of the highest points of the city, far up town, and the roof is built with a deep railing, or parapet, after the manner of Italian villas, on purpose to allow of the roof garden for the summer time. A view of the entire city and the surrounding country can be had from this roof, with the Capitol and Washington Monument, and the gold dome of the Library of Congress standing conspicuously out, to say nothing of the hills of Virginia, with Arlington in the foreground.

MERELY a remnant of diplomatic society remains here. Of this the Minister from Nicaragua and Mme. Corea, and Mr. Canseco, of the Mexican embassy, form an interesting portion. Minister Corea is entertaining Senor Jose Gamez, minister of foreign affairs of Nicaragua, accompanied by his son and his secretary.

The little party of the minister's guests are at the New Willard, but the minister visits them every day and arranges their schedule of entertainments and sight-seeing. The Minister and Mme. Corea are remaining later in the country home of the latter's parents than they had any intention of doing.

Mr. Canseco will leave early in the week for his new post in Brazil, which will remove from diplomatic circles one of the wealthiest and most eligible of the young bachelors of that set.
